Sr. Director, Leadership Development, Networking Company

Amanda Price

Amanda Price works with individuals, teams and organizations who understand the significance and value of effective communication. Her goal is to empower people to engage and communicate with confidence, honesty, and empathy. She is passionate about helping transform habits of thought and behavior that no longer serve and cultivating a quality of connection and flow of communication that ignites the greatest potential in any working relationship.

Amanda has eighteen years of experience in field and corporate human resources management in the high-tech industry. Most recently at Juniper Networks, she performed a wide variety of HR roles and was provided the unique opportunity to both observe and participate in driving organizational transformation impacting culture, learning, team-building, operations, performance management, leadership development, organizational effectiveness and conflict resolution. The culmination of her experiences fed her desire to take action to rehumanize workplaces, placing empathy, co-creation and effective communication at the core of all interactions and initiatives.

Amanda offers customized training and consulting for individuals and organizations committed to creating and promoting more authenticity, success and satisfaction. She also offers public workshops and presentations on the fundamentals of Nonviolent Communication (NVC).

Amanda is a Talent Optimization Certified Consultant with the Predictive Index and has been certified in the Myers-Briggs Type Indicator (MBTI), Crucial Conversations, and True Colors® Personal Success Facilitation. She is currently an NVC Certified Trainer candidate with the Center for Nonviolent Communication. She holds a B.A. in Psychology, having graduated magna cum laude from Bates College.

Amanda lives with her husband and three children in MetroWest. She is a permaculture design practitioner and an avid explorer and supporter of holistic health and alternative education strategies.
